tion after a so-called rolling review that allowed it to assess information about the vaccine as it came in, starting back in October.

"The safety of the public will always come first," said Dr. June Raine, the agency's chief executive. "And I emphasize again that this recommendation has only been given by the MHRA following the most rigorous scientific assessment of every piece of data."

Getting that message to the public will be critical if any vaccination program is to be successful. Some people are worried about getting any vaccine, never mind a new one.

"But I think once they understand and see everyone else having it without hesitation, I think you'll find that people will go and have it," Jacqueline Roubians, a 76-year-old retired nurse, said at Brixton Market in London. "People are dying of COVID, so you make that decision: Do you want to die or do you want the vaccine?"

In addition to the huge logistical challenges of distributing the vaccines, the Pfizer-BioNTech one must be stored and shipped at ultra-cold temperatures of around minus 70 degrees Celsius (minus 94 degrees Fahrenheit).

Pfizer said it has developed shipping containers that use dry ice and GPS-enabled sensors will allow the company to

Wheeling SleepOut Set For Friday

Youth Services System will hold its 10th annual Wheeling SleepOut Friday, Dec. 4. The event will take place on the YSS Facebook page and will include video entertainment by local musicians, a storyteller and an appearance by Santa Claus. The Home for the Holidays-themed event fundraiser will benefit the YSS Transitional Living Program to prevent homelessness for older youth ages 17-21. Prizes will be awarded for top fundraiser, most votes in the inaugural Home for the Holidays Window Display Contest in which 10 businesses competed, and best cardboard structure in the Boxed-In Design Contest. Pictured are picnic sponsors Mike Abraham, left, and Marc Abraham of Abraham & Co. P.L.L.C. in Moundsville, with Betsy Bethel-McFarland, YSS communications manager. Marc Abraham has served on the YSS board for 35 years. He said: "I want to support youth and homeless people in general, and this is the least we can do. $10,000 sounds like a lot of money, but what YSS does every day is really incredible. Mike and I just want to show our gratitude and help the community and in particular YSS." The fundraising goal for the SleepOut is $50,000.
