Locals ensure shelters have a Merry Christmas

By CARRI GRAHAM

THE TIMES LEADER

BELLABE - Homeless shelters in the Ohio Valley helped to make sure there was a warm place to sleep and an enjoyable holiday this year.

The Bellabe Salvation Army provided a lot of needed items to more than 60 people this Christmas day, along with presents for adults and children.

Mayor Louis Patric had the shelter last 29 days this Christmas season, up from 20 last year. At around 10 a.m. Friday, members of the Salvation Army and their holiday guests filled the Salvation Army to capacity.

Even though there was a little excess in the area between two gifts and every child got multiple gifts to open.

In the afternoon, the seniors were served a hot Christmas meal and presented with gifts and other side dishes.

The shelter has been open to make the day feel cozy for the residents.

‘I think people (in Eastern Ohio) are so torn from the one they’ve been trying to change and protecting the air and water for the three years we’ve been operating,’” said Williamson.

Williamson said the area’s industries need to adjust their number because of the climate change and not adjust to the industries that bring these issues up and push them off to someone else.

Williamson said the area’s industries need to adjust their number because of the climate change and not adjust to the industries that bring these issues up and push them off to someone else.

The residents deserve to be heard regarding this project. The reason we sued ODNR is because there’s nothing in the law that calls for a public meeting. If…the written public hearing notice for the project is not consistent with environmental laws, then we will be in violation of those laws. … Williamson said he was not sure if the permit for his project was 100% complete.

“This is a really touchy subject,” Ferrell said. “The residents deserve to be heard regarding this project. The reason we sued ODNR is because there’s nothing in the law that calls for a public meeting. If…the written public hearing notice for the project is not consistent with environmental laws, then we will be in violation of those laws. … Williamson said he was not sure if the permit for his project was 100% complete.”

Williamson gave us a click, we’d do the rest. The project is not consistent with environmental laws, then we will be in violation of those laws. … Williamson said he was not sure if the permit for his project was 100% complete.”

Williamson said the area’s industries need to adjust their number because of the climate change and not adjust to the industries that bring these issues up and push them off to someone else.

Williamson said the area’s industries need to adjust their number because of the climate change and not adjust to the industries that bring these issues up and push them off to someone else.